

Youth Climate Justice

Developmental Group Work Theory of Change

ASSUMPTIONS

- 1 In relation to climate justice issues, young people are marginalised and disenfranchised in relation to policy, public debate, and action.
- 2 Group work within youth work settings can build on young people's own associations, interactions, and group formations to provide a meaningful space within which to encourage and support young people's articulation of views, needs, and concerns in relation to climate justice.
- 3 Within group work processes young people can be empowered to develop the capacity to critically consider, situate themselves within, and act in relation to climate justice issues.

